Happy Winter Solstice, Everyone!

Below is a beautiful photo taken yesterday in Houston, TX of Jupiter and Saturn. The conjunction is exact today, and, barring clouds or fog, will be visible in the southwest sky shortly after sunset. Here's hoping we'll all have clear skies tonight!

Merry, merry,

Scooter

What does this mean?

From our own astrologer: Cheryl Hopkins

"The buzz around the Jupiter Saturn conjunction is due to the event occurring in Aquarius, an air sign. It marks the beginning of the next phase of a significant shift in the collective awareness of our relationship to each other, other forms of life, and humanity as a whole.

Every twenty years Jupiter and Saturn come together at the same degree and is called The Great Conjunction. For roughly 200 years these Great Conjunctions occur in the astrological signs of one element. From 1802 to 1980 the conjunctions occurred in Earth signs. During that time the emphasis was on the physical, tangible dimension of man's reality in material discovery and acquisition, building structures and businesses, creating wealth, science, and logic to name a few Earth sign associations.

Earth gave way to Air when the conjunction occurred in 1980 in Libra and returned to Earth in Taurus in 2000 for the last time in the cycle. The conjunctions will occur in Air signs from now through Halloween 2219. During this time humanity's focus will be on areas associated with Air signs; concepts, ideas, the mental aspect of the human psyche, different forms of intelligence, relationship, what lies beyond the five senses, an expanded spiritual awareness, contact with our galactic neighbors are just some of what we will see over the coming generations."

Sounds perfect for Monroe!
